The Right Honourable Stephen Harper, P.C., M.P.,
Prime Minister of Canada
House of Commons
Ottawa, ON K1A 0A6

Dear Prime Minister Harper:

Re: Environment Canada's Proposed Recovery Strategy for the Woodland Caribou (Rangifer tarandus caribou), Boreal Population, in Canada – Saskatchewan

I am writing to you to express my concern over the proposed Recovery Strategy of the Woodland Caribou (Rangifer tarandus caribou), Boreal Population, in Canada (the Proposed Recovery Strategy) that was released for public comment on August 26, 2011.

As a business person from the Saskatoon area I am very aware that the mining industry is a primary driver of Saskatchewan's economy particularly in northern Saskatchewan where it provides one of the very few opportunities for economic advancement of communities.

You have recognized the important role the resource sector played in ensuring Canada remained relatively unaffected during the global economic recession and its continuing recovery, by providing high quality employment, business opportunities and investing in the sector. Your government has taken a number of actions to build on these contributions.

The Government of Canada has also signalled its commitment to economic development opportunities in northern Canada, currently a region that is economically disadvantaged and infrastructure limited, but also one of opportunity. The mining industry in northern Saskatchewan is also committed to ensuring residents and businesses of northern Saskatchewan benefit from mining activity in the region, and they are global leaders in this regard. In 2010 the uranium mining industry spent over $330 million on salaries, wages and benefits for its direct employees. Of this, over $90 million was paid to over 1400 residents of Saskatchewan's north. The industry's contractors paid out an additional $217 million to their employees. In 2010 the value of goods and services purchased by the industry was $916 million. Over 67% ($618 million) of this amount went to businesses based in Saskatchewan and 39% ($361 million) went to businesses based in northern Saskatchewan.

Strategically, Canada, solely through mineral production from Saskatchewan, provided 18% of the world's uranium in 2010 with a value of mineral production of $1.4 Billion. This proportion is poised to increase to over 25% of global uranium production in the next few years further securing Canada as a dominant supplier of a reliable and clean energy to the world. The region also produces gold, and potentially base and rare earth metals, and diamond.

However, the Proposed Recovery Strategy developed by Environment Canada places the economic and social contributions the mining industry makes to the communities, Saskatchewan, Canada and global energy security at risk while not offering any realistic recovery strategy for woodland caribou. The Proposed Recovery Plan would severely limit or prohibit any further resource or infrastructure development in northern Saskatchewan, and significant parts of northern Alberta and the Northwest Territories. Even worse, it is far from certain that implementing such severe restrictions on human and industrial activity would have any impact whatsoever on the modeled sustainability of the woodland caribou populations, given the predominant weighting that natural fires have on the model, (fires result in over 60% disturbance in most Saskatchewan units compared to only 2% human or industrial disturbance).

The Strategy is counterproductive to your Government's initiatives that support sustainable economic development and it undermines the good work that has been done with respect to the principle of regulatory certainty.

Yours sincerely,
